

The Weekly Man

The Characters

I guess the first thing to say about the main characters is that their names sound strangely alike. But...maybe this is what draws them together. Or maybe it's just a fluke.

Jack

Jack's a cartoonist. And just about the most paranoid human on the planet. He's been trying to date a woman he's in love with (Valerie Vine) for years but keeps chickening out because he thinks she's working for Them.

Jackson

Jackson is an excruciatingly boring person whose well-organized life is skewed by a long-kept secret that starts to push him out of his comfort zone.

Jax

Jax is a total wing nut who believes that he's in contact with a cyber being that wants to communicate with humankind through him. The being tells him to murder one of the other characters.

Jacky

Jacky is a photographer who falls in love with a woman he can see only one day a week.

Jacques

Jacques is a writer of erotic romance stories who mistakenly sends an email that brings his career crashing down, forcing him to change his identity.

Jac

Jac is also a writer. But he's also the single most hated man on Earth when children start killing themselves after reading his books.

Jackie

Jackie, a playwright, is the only female main character. She's spent her entire life hating her life, until she makes a stunning discovery.
